PAST EVENTS

BLACK HISTORY CELEBRATIONS —FEBRUARY/MARCH 2021

Whether you were able to attend all or one of our February events, thanks to all who celebrated Dr. James Still’s legacy with us! In addition to our featured events, our volunteers also participated in presentations with the KROC Center’s ‘A Celebration of Black History’ and WHY’s ‘You Oughta Know’ series.

You can watch both recordings on YouTube if you were unable to attend.

A huge thanks goes to all of our volunteers for dedicating their time, hands and knowledge!!

WEEKDAY SPRING MIGRATION BIRD WALKS—APRIL/MAY 2021

During the Spring, local naturalist and birder Patty Rehn lead bird walks through various habitats at the Dr. James Still Historic Site . Meeting on Thursday afternoons and maintaining social distancing, attendees spotted various species of birds along our nature trails and enjoyed the crisp fresh outdoor air.

COMMUNITY STRONGER TOGETHER

THERE'S AN HERB FOR THAT! HERBAL CORNER

<https://unsplash.com/s/photos/milkweed>

Milkweed (latin name: Asclepias) is mainly known to attract monarch butterflies. Despite its name, it's actually not a weed at all, rather a species of wildflower that is native to North America and named after the Greek god of healing, Asclepius. Milkweed blossoms into small, colorful, star-shaped flowers that are great for pollination. The plant secretes a white, milky film when the leaves are damaged, which can be an eye and skin irritant and harmful to pets if ingested.

Despite this plant's hazardous self-defense system, milkweed has a lot of benefits to add to your garden. It suppresses pests, like stink bugs and aphids, and also absorbs toxic oil spill contaminants. It's a vital source of nectar for bees and wasps and can be used to remove warts. Milkweed leaves have also been used in salves for asthma, cough suppression, rashes, swelling and typhus fever. Commercially, milkweed seeds' feathery fibers are cultivated for pillow and mattress stuffing. We recently planted milkweed in our butterfly garden on-site and are excited to enjoy its blooms along the trail.

ON-SITE UPDATES

We are proud to announce that the stabilization project for Dr. James Still's office is now complete! We are very grateful to see the office brought closer to its original structure. Check out before and after pictures on our website.

Our volunteers have been very busy over the past few months around the site. You may have driven by and seen them on mowers, raking, pushing a wheel barrel or watering the plants. Garden beds were weeded and tended to, new plants potted, the nature trail has been continuously cut down and cleared, and new raised beds were installed.

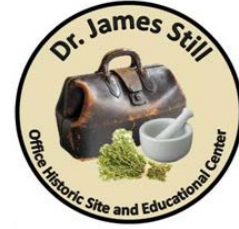

Stay posted for future webinars and virtual events through our website and Facebook page. You can also follow us on Instagram. We are very grateful to have your support and look forward to your continued participation as we build awareness of Dr. James Still and work to preserve his legacy.

SCHOOL TOURS CANCELLED UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

Please note that our school tours have been cancelled until further notice. However, we are exploring other options in the interim. If you or your organization would like to coordinate an on-site or virtual presentation in the future, please email drjamesstill-center@gmail.com.
